 Director, Defense Intelligence Agency
 Room 3E-258, The Pentagon

Jim:

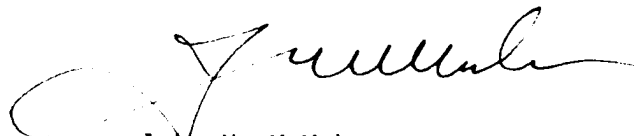

You had mentioned that the Defense Intelligence College will be running a number of courses that could be helpful to CIA analysts. These courses center on strategic warning and other useful subjects that will, I am sure, serve the broader community effort to train well-rounded intelligence analysts. I have informed my Director of the Office of Training and Education, [redacted] of your suggestion and he enthusiastically supports our participation. He tells me that at the moment we are actively considering sending a DDI analyst to the Defense Intelligence College's six-week military analyst program; further, that we also are pursuing some of the college's other offerings. You can expect that we will take full advantage of your generous offer.

25X1

Two of my senior officers have recently participated in a bimonthly meeting sponsored by DIA, that included representatives from much of the Intelligence Community, to discuss the broader subject of community analyst training. I am told that one of the fall-outs of this meeting and other discussions with DIA officers has been a better understanding of what is available in the way of such training. These discussions indicate the need for keeping in better touch with training programs throughout the community. In pursuit of this, a representative of the Agency's Office of Training and Education intends to hold periodic meetings with his counterparts in the community -- an effort that has already been favorably received around town.

You should also know that CIA is proposing a cooperative community analyst training effort to begin in FY 1986. The details have been briefed to DIA training and the Defense Intelligence School, as well as to NSA. There is universal agreement that this is an excellent idea and long overdue. I understand that the Intelligence Producers Council will soon be briefed on this effort. I look forward to its support.

Sincerely,

John N. McMahon
 Acting Director

STAT

1. Regarding Lt. General Williams' reference to new DIA courses, we have recently been in close contact with DIA training and the Defense Intelligence College in pursuit of a FY 1986 Community analyst training effort. Last month, [REDACTED] participated in a bi-monthly DIA meeting which included representatives of the DIA, Defense Intelligence College and the Services (at our suggestion, NSA was also invited) to discuss Community analyst training. One of the fallouts of this meeting and other discussions with DIA has been a better understanding of what's available for analysts. We have been in touch with the DDI regarding sending a DDI analyst to the Defense Intelligence College's six-week military analyst program. We will also pursue some of their other offerings.

STAT

2. Incidentally, the response has been enthusiastic to a CIA-led Community analyst training program in FY 1986. This would involve some six courses for about 500 Community analysts at an initial cost of some 900K.

SUBJECT: Defense Intelligence College

3. Our discussions with DIA and NSA regarding Community analyst training indicate that there is much fruitful work that can be done in this and possibly other areas. At a minimum, we should keep in better touch with training efforts in the Community. In pursuit of this, I have asked [redacted] to hold a meeting periodically with his counterparts in the Community. This idea has already been favorably received by the Community.

MEMORANDUM FOR: Director, Office of Training & Education
FROM: Deputy Director of Central Intelligence
SUBJECT: Defense Intelligence College

The Defense Intelligence College, located at the new DIA building, has laid out a number of courses which Lt.General Williams feels would be very helpful to CIA. These courses center on early warning and other military-type subjects. I think it would be very useful if we were able to participate in them. Suggest you tie in with DIA to see what courses would be beneficial to us.

Dear [REDACTED]

25X1

On behalf of the students, faculty, and staff of the Defense Intelligence College I am pleased to confirm arrangements made by [REDACTED] concerning your forthcoming address to the National Senior Intelligence Program (NSIP) students. Your presentation is scheduled for 1-hour on Friday, June 1, 1984, beginning at 1:30 p.m.

Your presentation is a key part of NSIP which is conducted once a year at the Defense Intelligence College. The NSIP is the senior course offered by the College and is aimed at the individual in positions of management and/or policy. In this 8-week program we try to make the student aware of issues and concepts in intelligence and the forces affecting national intelligence policies. This class will consist of approximately 25 experienced intelligence professionals (O-5s and GS-13/GS-14s) from the Services and Department of Defense agencies.

We are most interested in your observations about policy implementation in the intelligence community, the outlook for the influence of the intelligence community on decisionmaking, and the role of the analyst and the pressures he or she can expect to encounter. As mentioned by [REDACTED] however, the range of topics can be as broad as the students' questions. A copy of the Program Directive for NSIP is attached, as well as a map and instructions on how to reach the College. 25X1

[REDACTED] will make any specific arrangements your appearance may require.

I am indeed most grateful for your interest in the College and your willingness to share your experiences with the NSIP students.

Sincerely,

25X1
